Obama's Last State of the Union and the Myth of Bipartisanship

President Barack Obama delivers his final State of the Union address at the US Capitol in Washington, January 12, 2016. (Photo: Stephen Crowley / The New York Times)

After seven years in the White House, President Obama still hasn't learned his lesson about Republicans. Case in point: his conclusion to last night's State of the Union address.

Looking back on his time as commander-in-chief, the president regretted that he had not done more to change our country's broken political system. Someone with the political "gifts" of Lincoln or FDR might have been able to do so, he said, but not him.

The idea here is that Lincoln and FDR were great presidents because they brought people together and forced them to make compromises. In other words, President Obama thinks that Lincoln and FDR were great presidents because they were "bipartisan."

This is just flat-out wrong.

What made Lincoln and FDR great wasn't the fact that they made compromises with their enemies; what made them great was the fact that they fought their enemies and supported policies that were right, even if they made people on the other side of the aisle really, really angry.

This probably sounds a little bizarre to some people. Bipartisanship, or at least the myth of bipartisanship, is so ingrained in our culture that many Americans forget what it really took for great presidents to become great. This is especially true in the case of President Lincoln.

Although his leanings were always towards compromise, the things we most remember him for - fighting the Civil War, signing the Emancipation Proclamation and passing the 13th Amendment - happened when he stopped being a moderate and embraced the radicals in his party who wanted him to become more - not less - partisan.

FDR, similarly, was the opposite of bipartisan. He was the ultimate fighter and he kicked Republicans in the butt and took their lunch money, too.

"The Power of OUR Union is Directly Related to YOUR Level of Activism in OUR Union."

Are You Willing To Do What It Takes?

not a quitter and I realize each person makes a difference.

The choice about yourself is yours?

It is very easy to sit back, criticize and do nothing. If that is your personality, then that is why the republican partisanship amplifies that absolute power corrupts absolutely. When you do to bed each night do not complain about the Democrats or Liberals or your 'Union Leadership!'

I would love to simply and completely devote myself to the three archery clubs I belong to; just to snowmobile; just to fish and enjoy the Northwood's where I live but I am mad about what is going on, I am

What is an American/Unionist?

An American/Unionists is one who puts aside their individual needs and individual self interest for that of the Country/membership.

An American/Unionists forgoes their personal agenda for that of their fellow Country/members.

An American/Unionists is not an:

Elitist
Sexist
Homophobic

Racists
Classist
Xenophobic

Listening to his speeches now is actually pretty shocking. Not only did he call Republicans out for being shills for the super-rich and the robber barons, but he also called them the enemies of the people and the enemies of democracy.

Tragically, although it's still very much true, President Barack Obama would never talk like that.

A great example of Roosevelt at the top of his game is the speech he gave on Halloween night, 1936, just three days before being elected to his second term as president. In that speech, he promised to keep on fighting his Republican enemies and the corporate elites they represented, telling his New York City audience that he "welcomed their hatred." Talking like that is the reason FDR was elected president four times, and it's the reason why he was arguably the greatest president in US history.

Being a great president doesn't mean making compromises with the enemies of democracy, who have always existed in this country and this point in time just happen to control the Republican Party. Being a great president means fighting the enemies of democracy head-on, as Lincoln did when he was at his best, and as FDR did the entire time he was in the White House.

The fact that President Obama doesn't understand this is his greatest flaw, especially because today's Republicans are as determined to undermine democracy as any faction in American history. And that's no exaggeration: conservatives literally planned to sabotage the Obama presidency the very first day it began.

On January 20, 2009, a night when the Obamas were dancing at inaugural balls, a group of Republicans were planning the end of the Obama presidency before it even got seriously going. At the Caucus Room restaurant in Washington, DC, they drew up a plan to intentionally sabotage Obama at every point possible.

On the guest list for this "invitation only" meeting were Republican Senators like Jim DeMint, Jon Kyl, Tom Coburn, John Ensign and Bob Corker. Also in attendance were Congressmen Paul Ryan, Pete Sessions, Jeb Hensarling, Pete Hoekstra, Dan Lungren, Eric Cantor and Kevin McCarthy.

Over the course of four hours, this group of powerful white conservative lawmakers committed to a plan of action. They promised each other that they would filibuster and obstruct any and all legislation supported by the United States' first Black President, Barack Obama.

As Mitch McConnell bragged, they would do everything possible, for as long as it took, to make his a "failed presidency." Newt Gingrich, who was also there at the Caucus Room, admitted a few years later that Republicans were actually intentionally trying to sabotage the Obama administration.

The framers of the Constitution had a word for this kind of politics: They called it sedition, and there can be no compromising with people who practice sedition.

With hundreds of millions of dollars of billionaire money at their disposal, today's Republicans are as dangerous as any group of economic royalists in US history. They have to be fought, not bargained with.

President Obama probably understands this better now, but he didn't understand it for most of his presidency. And he still apparently thinks that "bipartisanship" should be the end goal of our political system, even though it's obvious to everyone who's paying attention that in today's world, compromise-first politics are a recipe for a disaster.

Increased Request for Leadership Training – a Good Problem to Have

by Pepe Oulahan

As usual the December meeting of Lodge 66 included a call for leadership training at the William W. Winpisinger Education and Technology Center. In prior years our Lodge has never had trouble filling our quota of candidates for both the Leadership I and II courses offered each year. However, this year an abundance of members requested to be allowed to attend these sessions.

In response to the large amount of requests the local Education Committee and Executive Board announced at the January meeting that candidates to be submitted for enrollment will be selected through a random pick process with consideration given to making sure as many shops as possible are represented. After submitting our quota the Local will consider asking for extra seats if possible.

Local leadership attributes the increased interest to the great work our members are doing in their individual shops to identify and encourage leadership. It is also believed that workers are stepping up in reaction to the attacks that Republican Legislators in Wisconsin have leveled at workers in our state. Local Lodge 66 is very glad to see this level of interest and will continue to do everything possible to accommodate as many members wishing to learn more about our union as possible.

LL66 Shops Making Connections

by Pepe Oulahan

New member Maria Valencia was sworn in at the January meeting. Maria is represented by IAM in her new position as a Data Specialist at the Wisconsin Regional Training Partnership. WRTP is an organization dedicated helping workers secure union sanctioned apprenticeships and good paying unionized manufacturing jobs.

Maria Valencia takes IAM Oath., given by Business Agent Ben Elizondo

Maria was referred to her new position through the Labor Education and Training Center (LETC), which is another workforce development organization represented by Lodge 66. Maria's attendance at her first meeting is notable in that she stated that she heard about the meeting and felt compelled to attend despite having to take the bus in temperatures in the low teens. Welcome aboard sister!

WRTP/BIG STEP is a non-profit workforce intermediary dedicated to connecting individuals with careers in the manufacturing, construction, and emerging sectors while helping employers and unions find skilled workers to meet their demands.

OUR IMPACT IN 2014

The Winpisinger Center teaches what it is to be a trade unionist. By studying labor history and the role unions play in our society, students learn that unions are more than service organizations. We are part of a larger movement toward economic and social justice with dignity on the job.

This is a benefit for all Machinists Union members who want to be better informed and further their education in the Labor Movement; to become better activists at work, in United Lodge 66 and in their community.

The 2016 Schedule is now available at : <https://winpisinger.iamaw.org/>

Seniors Corner

Economic Policy Institute: Too Many Seniors are Working or Poor

The United States ranks eighth among 35 Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) countries in the share of 65- to 69-year-olds who are employed, according to a new report from the Economic Policy Institute. (copy and paste: http://www.epi.org/publication/the-real-american-retirement-crisis-too-many-seniors-are-working-or-poor/?can\_id=783012533579037540441924879781f2&source=email-january-15th-2016-friday-alert&email\_referrer=january-15th-2016-friday-alert&email\_subject=january-15th-2016-friday-alert&link\_id=4)

Thirty percent of 65- to 69-year-olds in the U.S. are employed, versus 20 percent in OECD countries on average. One explanation for why Americans are less likely to retire is that our retirement system replaces a lower share of pre-retirement income.

The numbers do not always follow the trends of other age groups. France, for instance, has the same employment rate for workers in their late 50s as the U.S., but has a much lower employment rate for workers in their late 60s.

Due to high income inequality, the United States also has a high senior poverty rate. This situation is likely to get worse, as many seniors today receive traditional pensions in addition to Social Security, whereas future seniors will rely more heavily on inadequate 401(k) plans.

“Some might say it is possible that American seniors enjoy working more than their counterparts in Europe and Canada, but I doubt that very much,” said Richard Fiesta, Executive Director of the Alliance. “The data offers further evidence that we need to expand our earned Social Security benefits.”
